Brand New Book  Print on Demand .I thought it only fitting to produce a publication that reflects a cultural perspective of what some of the dynamics that are involved with the actual funeral proceedings from the Black experience as a model that could possibly be used by willing participants and readers alike. The historical, global and universal considerations were applied to this particular attempt based on my convictions relative to this point of focus. Please be reminded that cultural here as within my previous publications speaks to one s beliefs, traditions and values. It is also only fitting to further attempt to emphasize some valuable information that is not typically brought out in many of the mainstream educational realms as with some public educational settings. Perhaps for many this is a very tender subject as with my own personal experiences in that regard. Having carried out the eulogy for several of my own family members, friends and colleagues, this required strength beyond what is believed to be sometimes perceived as what is commonly accepted as a reality for the standard in this instance. This involved eulogizing my mother, father, two brothers in whom one was murdered, my grandmother s sister, my play mother, father in law and his sister and several parishioners. Another perspective that I have been convicted to include was intermingled within some of the models that existed and still exist within our culture. This certainly goes beyond the enslavement period and the impact of systematic challenges of old like colonialism. In some instances, this further goes back thousands of years and in other instances to possibly the beginning of time. Therefore, I have attempted to bring a further sense...
